William D. Smith Raises Funds for the Women's Center of Fayetteville

Smith Hosts Art Expo and Wine Tasting Event

Fayetteville, North Carolina (October 24, 2007) – William D. Smith recently hosted an art exhibit of Carolyn Goodridge, a well established artist from New York, to benefit the Women's Center of Fayetteville.

William D. Smith, a Representative with John Hancock Financial Network, invited clients to enjoy this special event with art and wine tasting while they were helping the Women's Center.

"I'm so glad that I could offer this opportunity to the people who help the Women's Center of Fayetteville. This community means a great deal to me and I've been delighted to serve the citizens of this area throughout my career. The Women's Center is an outstanding organization that deserves the utmost support from all those that can provide it."

Smith is licensed to sell long term care insurance and licensed to sell securities. He is a member of NAIFA, a national non-profit industry organization. A graduate of Hampden-Sydney College, Smith is active in his community, devoting time and support to a number of organizations, including the Cardinal Club of Raleigh.
